War; it's been the name of the game between the "stuck-up snobs" from boarding school and the "village idiots" of the local school for as long as anyone can remember. It goes without saying that Felix and his friends aren't going to put up with sharing their state-of-the-art sports hall with those peasants! But their plans to keep them out succeed only too well, and revenge isn't long in coming. It's just too bad that Felix wakes up the night Lena from the village school sneaks into his room. Or maybe it's a lucky break, because to their astonishment they find they've got a lot in common and all this stupid fighting is actually pretty childish. Unfortunately it proves harder to convince everyone else...
