

Two football fans who also play regularly have a kick around with a few stories, passing and occasionally scoring the odd goal and, before the final whistle blows, try to explain to themselves and the rest of the world why football means everything to them: the friends bet all they've got on the prospects for promotion or relegation of »their« teams, relive magic moments and unforgettable goals as well as missed opportunities, argue over players and managers, tactics, scandals and the immense significance of football in the lives of so many people around the world.

Johannes Dräxler | Harald Braun
Braun, Harald
Football
160 Pages
ISBN 978-3-423-34288-9