

After her mother dies, 15-year-old Samantha moves from California with her father to make a fresh start in Trier. But the pupils at her new school take against her right from the start for no apparent reason, with the exception of Mike and Christoph. Perhaps they can throw some light on the situation. It turns out that Samantha is the spitting image of a former classmate – a girl who was killed under suspicious circumstances during a class outing last year. Samantha tries to get to the bottom of what really happened, but comes up against barriers of silence and mistrust every step of the way.

- A gripping read – psychologically convincing and full of surprising twists
