Johann, Nick, Florian and Mark are best friends. They have been inseparable for nearly ten years. But somewhere along the line, something has subtly changed. They have all begun to notice how different they are, and realise that each of them needs to grow up in their own way. But what is the best way of going about it? There are no role models for them to follow – no male role models, anyway. The four young men are surrounded by women: mothers, sisters and female teachers. Their fathers may as well not exist – they are either too busy or have disappeared completely. Where should they look for happiness? Perhaps the answer lies with the girls, after all.

Male, 15 years old. Drifting through life. Clueless.
Don't worry – you'll never walk alone.
