Florence Gaub: Scenario – The Future Is at Stake

- A book to make foreign policy concrete and vivid: crisis hotspots, options for action, consequences
- The NATO thinker provides an innovative introduction to the world of international power and military logic
- For readers of Herfried Münkler and Carlo Masala

BEST
AUTHOR

The political future of the world seems wide open – what does it hold for us? The future seems more frightening than it did just a few years ago. What it will look like doesn't depend solely on Russia and the US, but on a large number of players. By taking stock of what we actually know, what we don't know, and above all, what options for action are available, we retrieve the feeling that we too have a role to play in our future. Florence Gaub invites readers to make their own foreign policy decisions: Instead of merely being spectators of more or less plausible scenarios, readers can follow different decision-making paths. The book provides insights into possible decision-making processes and imparts a sense of self-determination.

Christoph Safferling: The Impotence of International Law

– The Return of War and Crimes Against Humanity

- Hot topic: The book traces the journey from 1945 to now and calls out the double standards and blind corners
- Worldwide return to imperial politics
- The author is an expert on how international law violations are currently handled

Genre: Current Affairs, Politics / Economics, Non-Fiction

Syria, Ukraine, Gaza: Is international law in tatters? Does the law of the jungle hold sway? With the Nuremberg Trials a new chapter in the history of international law began after the Second World War. And after the Cold War, a rule-based world order appeared realistic. But that is not the reality of the early 21st century, and not just since Russia invaded Ukraine. Israel's reaction to the massacre on 7th October also begs questions. International law today appears to be in ruins, brute force seems to prevail, and the global community seems to be settling into cynicism or resignation. Safferling's treatise is concise, competent, personal, and passionate. It encourages those who refuse to follow the path toward a civilizational abyss.

Christoph Safferling, born in 1971, is Professor of Criminal Law, Criminal Procedure Law, International Criminal Law, and International Law at the University of Erlangen-Nuremberg. He is the director of the International Nuremberg Principles Academy.

Hamed Abdel-Samad, Philipp Peyman Engel: What May Israel Do? – A Debate

- A timely and curageous political debate on the situation in the Middle East
- To be published on the anniversary of 7th October
- Two prominent German authors

A Turning Point in the Middle East – and in a friendship

The terrorist attack of October 7 and the ensuing war in Gaza have dramatically reshaped the political landscape of the Middle East. But the shockwaves have reached far beyond the region — even Germany is witnessing a profound shift. Long-standing taboos are suddenly being broken, and public discourse is becoming increasingly polarized. Even among friends, positions are hardening.

Hamed Abdel-Samad, an Egyptian-German political scientist, and Philipp Peyman Engel, the son of a Persian Jewish mother and a German father, swap letters about the situation in the Middle East. They discuss controversial matters, such as: Is Israel committing genocide in Gaza? Do the Palestinians want to wipe Israel off the map? Which side is Germany on? Do many people underestimate the meaning of 7th October 2023? How might a resolution to this conflict look?

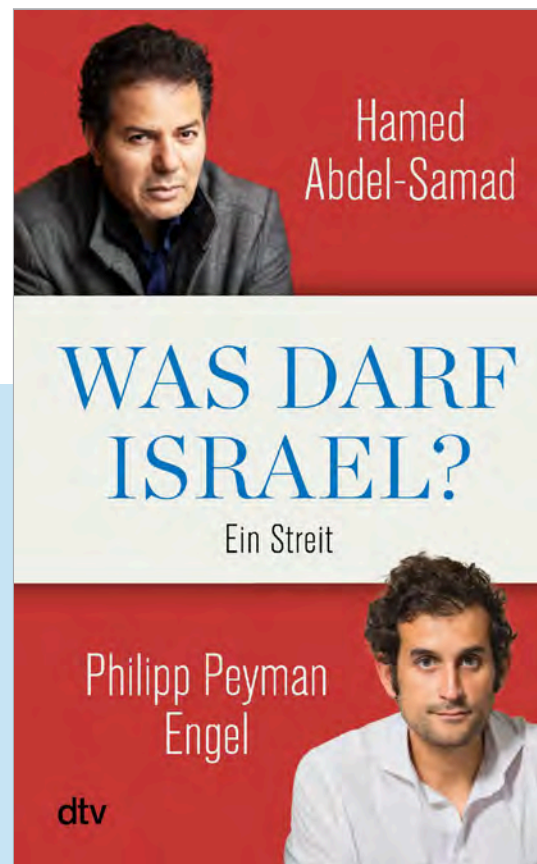

© Martin Hangen/hangenfoto

© Marco Limberg, 2023

Hamed Abdel-Samad studied English, French, Japanese, and Political Science. He has worked for UNESCO and held a professorship in Islamic Studies at the University of Erfurt and at the Institute for Jewish History and Culture at the University of Munich. Abdel-Samad is one of the most profiled Islamic intellectuals in the German-speaking world. As a result of his taboo-breaking autobiography an official fatwa was placed on him in 2013. Since then, he has lived under permanent police protection.

Philipp Peyman Engel, born in Herdecke in 1983, grew up in the Ruhr region as the son of a Persian-Jewish mother and a German father. He studied philosophy, education, and literature and media studies in Bochum and Essen. The journalist is the editor-in-chief of the weekly newspaper Jüdische Allgemeine. In 2023, he was awarded the title 'Editor-in-Chief of the Year.' Texts by Engel on Jewish life, anti-semitism, and Israel are published regularly in SPIEGEL, FAZ, and Deutschlandfunk.

Obsession with regulations, bureaucracy, political manipulation: the misery is home-made

Germany's infrastructure and Germany's houses are falling apart. Germany is losing its competitive edge and is failing to achieve the climate objectives. Germany is either flooding or overheating. Germany's buildings are growing old and many of them are not sustainable.

Gerhard Matzig, features editor of Süddeutsche Zeitung, explains why that is the case, what we must and what we can do in order to improve or rebuild the country, its roads, factories, homes and dykes. In this very knowledgeable and clear polemic, he addresses failed policies and presents what should be done now, what it will cost and how it should be approached.

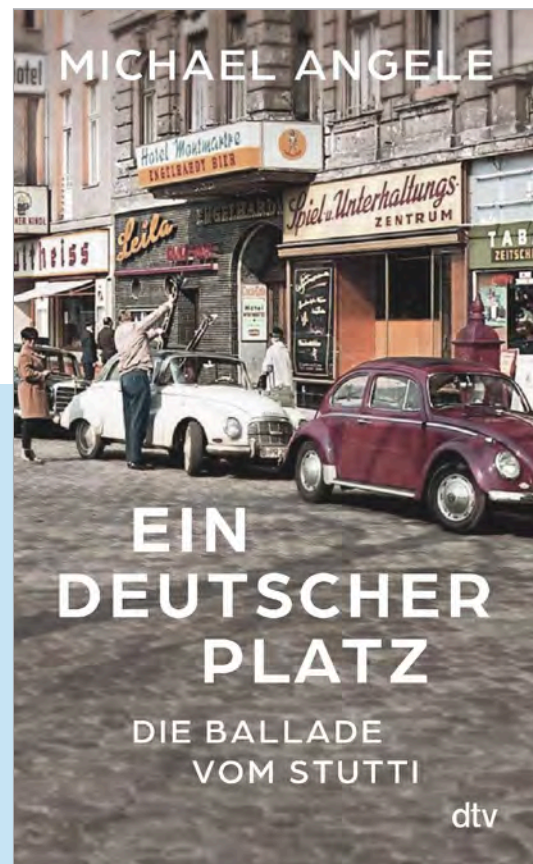

© Katharina Matzig

Gerhard Matzig, born 1963, studied architecture and politics in Passau and Munich. He gained his engineering degree in 1993. He did his journalism training at the Passauer Neue Presse and went on to publish books and do freelance work for newspapers and magazines. He has been an editor for Süddeutsche Zeitung since 1997. For his articles about architecture, urban planning and design, Gerhard Matzig has received numerous awards. He is married, has three children and lives in Munich.

Michael Angele: A German Square – The Ballad of Stutti

- Offers a rich, character-driven narrative of post-war West Germany
- West-Berlin as a microcosm for political and cultural developments
- For readers of Harald Jähner and Uwe Wittstock

A square that makes history come alive
Stuttgarter Platz in West Berlin is more than just a location - it's a living archive of Germany's turbulent 20th century. From the decadence of Babylon Berlin to becoming a centre of the black market to sanctuary for war refugees, from its days as a red-light district to becoming the cradle of the student movement or the hub for underground culture in the 1980s. The author traces the vibrant stories and iconic figures that shaped "Stutti," including the legendary Babalu bar and the filming of The Hooligans (Die Halbstarken) starring Karin Baal and Horst Buchholz. The famed "Elefant" café was long run by Leo Fischmann, a concentration camp survivor, while counterculture icon Rainer Langhans moved into a grand old apartment nearby. Stuttgarter Platz is where Germany's major political and cultural currents converge.

A reflection on identity and memory and a call to engage!

Peter Jordan, born in 1967, describes himself as someone who thinks about WW II and the Shoah every single day. As an actor and public figure, he continues to grapple with his relationship to German culture - a struggle that began in his youth, when everything "German" felt suspicious, stale, and burdened by history.

But the birth of his child changed everything. Suddenly, the need arose to name and pass on what is one's own. This is a deeply personal narrative that speaks directly to our times. As the question of what Germany is (and what it might become) is increasingly contested by far-right movements and debated internationally, Jordan offers a fearless and intimate response.

© Jeanne Degraa

Peter Jordan, born in 1967 in Dortmund, first studied medicine and then between 1991 and 1994, studied acting at the Hochschule für Musik und Theater in Hamburg. Numerous engagements at various renowned theatres in Germany followed. Furthermore, he has starred in numerous film and TV productions. In 2003, he was awarded the Advancement Award of the Akademie der Künste in the context of the Kunstpreise Berlin (Berlin Art Prize). Since 2009, Peter Jordan has lived and worked in Berlin as a freelance actor, director and theatre author.

Geraldine Schüle: Our Wild Farm – Cows, Content and the Courage to Live Your Dreams

- When a vision comes alive: an inspiring memoir
- Tradition and innovation: colourful family life between self-sufficiency and social media
- A joy to read: share the couple's excitement and dream away

Follow your dream and there will be happiness at the end of the rocky road. Geraldine and Patrick have chosen to live surrounded by nature on a farm with an old-fashioned stove, a cow pasture, a sheepfold and a cottage garden: "We consciously chose a life of hard work far off the beaten path. Surrounded by timber we cut ourselves, living without heating until renovations were done, running a small farm, and working digital jobs as content creators where the day never truly ends. It's a life far removed from the city -and yet completely in tune with the times. A life with little luxury, but with the greatest freedom we could imagine. Every day is an adventure for us and for all those who, like us, seek the best of seemingly opposing worlds." This is the story of how a vision became reality and a host of larger and smaller adventures led to the best life the author and her partner could imagine for themselves and their two children.

Geraldine Ortlieb-Schüle, born in 1993, comes from Staufen in the Breisgau area. After some travels around the world, she studied geography and ethnology in Cologne. She also studied to be a circus trainer and a clown. She has worked in a circus, written books about her travels and given story telling seminars for companies and academies throughout Germany. Together with her husband and their two children, their sheep, cows, dog and cat, she lives in a 500-year-old abbey farmhouse in need of renovation.

Katrin Schaudig, Katrin Simonsen: Hot Stuff – Understanding Menopause

- Entered the Bestseller Lists within two weeks of first publication
- A vital, up-to-date guide – rich in information, grounded in science, and deeply supportive.
- For readers of "Woman on fire" by Sheila de Liz

Navigating Menopause with Confidence and Clarity

Mood swings, aching joints, disturbed sleep, weight gain, hot flushes – the menopause can be a real challenge. When hormones go haywire, women experience an entirely natural yet for some difficult transition. In Hot Stuff: Understanding Menopause, renowned gynaecologist Dr. Katrin Schaudig and journalist Katrin Simonsen provide clear, compassionate answers to the most pressing questions.

With medical precision and accessible language, they explore the wide range of symptoms, explain the biological processes behind them, outline treatment options, and offer practical advice. Their goal: to empower women to speak confidently and knowledgeably with their healthcare providers.

A must-have resource for women worldwide seeking clarity, comfort, and control during menopause.

What if happiness isn't what we think it is? In this sharp, witty, and thought-provoking exploration, bestselling author Florian Schroeder dives headfirst into the modern happiness industry. From life coaching and cuddle workshops to drugs and digital wellness apps, he tests the promises of a culture obsessed with feeling good. He even meets those who find joy in pain.

Schroeder's take is direct, ironic and unapologetically curious. With a mix of personal experience and cultural critique, he asks: What does make us truly happy - and what do we just think makes us happy? Perhaps happiness is what we experience when we stop chasing it?

Expanded new edition of the famous disputative treatise

The Second Vatican Council was the revolutionary attempt to modernise the Roman Catholic Church. In 1965, Pope Paul VI abolished the Roman Liturgy against the advice of many bishops. However, this did not resolve the crisis and the conflict between tradition and modernity.

Martin Mosebach critically examines the end of this tradition and debates whether the final word has already been spoken on the old ritual.

A Thrilling Journey into Europe's Forgotten Foundations
 For decades, the Ottonian period was seen as a defining era of Europe's heartland. Hence, the Nazi regime ideologically hijacked it to justify its vision of a "Thousand-Year Reich." Today, archaeology is being rewritten - revealing the real story behind one of Europe's most pivotal epochs. From the spectacular excavations of Queen Editha's and Emperor Otto the Great's tombs in Magdeburg Cathedral, to the latest discoveries of Ottonian castles and palaces, and cutting-edge archaeogenetic research into ancient noble graves, this book offers material worthy of the next Indiana Jones. Told by a team of authors who masterfully blend scientific insight with gripping storytelling, this book is both intellectually rich and wildly entertaining.
